

LADIES AID PLAY WILL KILL GLOOM!

UNITED CHURCH LADIES AID
HAVE SPLENDID OFFERING FOR NEXT WEEK

The spirit of gloom which seems to have been cast by late threatening and other little matters will surely be chased away for all who visit the theatre on October 29th (next Wednesday) to witness the melodramatic offering under the auspices of the Ladies Aid of the United Church.

The cast of characters under the able guidance of Mrs. H. L. Courner have been working hard on this play for some time, and on a preview of the production it can truly be said that it is a first-class "class" character.

The story deals with life in a Southwestern State where an unmitigated marriage, causes the banishment of an only daughter.

Twenty years later the offspring of this marriage, having lost the maternal mother through starvation and poverty, is brought into the good graces of her maternal grandmother through the kindly offices of a friend, but although received back into the fold of her mother is denied the usual privileges of such life, and is still made to feel that she is a leprosy by assuming names of her grandmother. At the latter's death the only will to be found gives the inheritance to these nurses, and for some time they enjoy this ill-gotten wealth, until by a turn of fortune's cards the true will and testament is brought to light.

The story ends with the heroes obtaining her rightful possessions through the actions of an old Black Mammy, who has stuck to her through thick and thin, and the plotter being found out.

The situations raised by this character are such that unless you really want to have a good laugh and thoroughly enjoy the evening don't go to see the play. Just buy your ticket and stay!

The play is full of humorous situations, although the author and actors are not lost sight of by the author, and the production promises to be among the best offered in Wainwright for some long time.

Wednesday, October 29th, at the Elite theatre.

TO BE OR NOT TO BE IS QUESTION?

With one of the largest crops which this district has ever had waiting to be disposed of, first dampened by rain while in stock, and then subjected to one of the worst October blizzards the country has ever experienced, a situation has arisen which calls for the most careful consideration on the part of every farmer, according to his own individual circumstances.—To thresh NOW or wait for more favorable and drier weather is the question! That is engaging the attention of the whole district. There is no question about the grain being damp; every field which is being threshed since the storm is delivering damp or wet grain. No one can tell what the weather will be but with the season so early, and the prices for grain so low, it would seem to be a fair chance to wait a little for the possibility of favorable threshing weather; which course many of the more conservative-minded farmers appear to favor.

"I don't propose to let my man make a grabby out of my heart to bury his perditionity in it," is Mauney's assertion in "A Southern Cinderella" at the theatre Oct. 29th.

TURKEY DINNER BY ANGLICAN CH. W.A.

LADIES OF ST THOMAS' CHURCH
MEET BIG RESPONSE FOR EFFORTS

Despite the terrible stormy weather, and the sudden cold spell which arrived on Wednesday morning last, the ladies of St Thomas' Anglican Church met with a wonderful response to their efforts to stage their annual turkey dinner.

The well loaded tables set out in the Masonic hall were filled time and time again with those who were thus anxious to assist. The funds of the Auxiliary, with the result, indeed, that the ladies were kept working until a very late hour to supply all those who desired to partake.

The whole affair was well managed, and those responsible are to be congratulated upon the highly successful result of their efforts which certainly must have added nicely to the coffers of the organization.

DEKAN GROTO GIVE ANOTHER WHIST PARTY

At the usual whist drive in the Masonic hall by the Dekan Groto held last Friday, only a fair attendance was present, although a very pleasant time was spent. Some eleven tables were in play and scores run about the average, the prizes for the evening going to Mrs. W. Yeager and Mr. A. Horne. All scores under the auspices of the Dekan Groto in the aggregate contest for the grand prize to be distributed at the close of the series. At the close of play after a delicious lunch, a nice little dance was enjoyed for a short while.

Having a real enjoyable time at a rendezvous of former Wainwright winners, a number of skaters put in the afternoon on Sunday making their skates ring on Linper's lake just south of the track.

MONTHLY LUNCHEON MTG. OF BOARD OF TRADE

The monthly luncheon of the Board of Trade which was held on Friday last was a nice gathering in attendance, and after the "rats" had been done full justice to by Mr. J. Cuthbert, one of the most interesting talks on the subject of "Financial conditions" as they affect us. He brought out many good points, and was listened to with attention. Other speakers at the meeting were Mr. E. Moir of Calgary and Rev. Hugh Diefenbach of whom also were interesting in their remarks. Mr. W. Huntingford was chairman for the day.

NEW MILESTONE IN HISTORY OF ALBERTA

The transfer of the natural resources of Alberta from federal to provincial control on October 1st last marked a new milestone in the history of the province. The day also marked the twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization of the province.

In dealing editorially with this important matter the Calgary Herald says:

The transfer of the natural resources places many new responsibilities on the government of Alberta and it adds new expenses, but it also brings new opportunities. This province is at last placed on an equality with the other provinces. Hitherto it has occupied, along with Saskatchewan and Manitoba, a subordinate place in the Canadian confederation. The other six provinces have exercised direct control over their own domain and have been able to direct colonization, land settlement and development projects. Out of our woods, minerals, timber and water powers was in the hands of federal officials and the province had nothing to say.

The administration of the natural resources presents several major problems to the Brownlee government. It is a subject which has received no consideration and thorough study by the provincial officials. Hereafter, no blame can be placed on Ottawa and the cry of distant government is without further meaning.

Under the agreement reached between the federal and Alberta governments, the chief provisions are:

- (1) The province gets all its unalienated possessions.
- (2) The former subsidy in lieu of resources amounting to $560,000 is to be increased as population increases to a maximum of $1,125,000.
- (3) The school lands are to be administered in accordance with the laws of the province, the constitutionality of which the courts have upheld.
- (4) The natural parks in the first instance remain with the Dominion, but the province, in its right of mineral exploitation, and the distribution of revenue is a subject of future agreement, should any question arise.
- (5) There is to be a commission to see if the province by reason of alienation is entitled to any special award. This consists of Judge Turgeon, of Saskatchewan, and C. N. Bowman, of Waterloo, who acted in the Manitoba case with F. E. Osborne of Calgary representing the province.
- (6) There is to be a reclassification of park boundaries to eliminate all of the present boundaries and hand them to the province and also to include Spray Lakes from federal control.

The Herald believes the agreement is favorable to this province and devoted a special section to the subject of the agreement and contribution to the prosperity of Alberta there is little room to doubt.

RELIEF REQUESTS FAR EXCEED FUND

PREMIER ASKS FOR GREATER
CONSIDERATION BY PUBLIC AUTHORITIES

EDMONTON—"Have a heart," or words to that effect, would be the burden of Premier Brownlee's message if he were leaving a manifesto to the public just now. He is, at any rate, making an appeal for consideration and co-operation with the government on the part of municipal districts and boards of trade in facing the prospective unemployment situation. That situation is sufficiently difficult as it is, he says, and if these public bodies could be reasonably sympathetic in making up their requests for relief, it would help.

Already 40 or 50 times the entire amount granted by the Dominion has been asked for in the total requests that the government has received, and they are still coming. A single town has asked for 100,000, the whole of the province, another town with only a few hundred population, wants more than Lechbridge, and in a third case a large program has been asked for, with only one unemployed man in the place.

An organized effort is being made by every board of trade and town along the provincial highways, says the premier, "to press for the immediate completion of that particular piece of road. Municipalities are coming with large requests. Extension of the relief fund to the province is being asked for in places where we know no serious unemployment problem exists."

Mr. Brownlee points out that the contributions by the Dominion and province are essentially in the nature of subsidies and based on the nature of the unemployment, with a limit to the amount that any one man may earn. The government is therefore asking for the co-operation of all concerned so that claims under the relief scheme may be based solely on the relief required and the actual circumstances of the case.

OTTAWA CLOSING LAND OFFICE AT PROVOST

PROVOST—"The Dominion land office at Provost, closed permanently last week, consequent on the taking over by the Alberta government of the natural resources of the province. Norval Agar, local agent, received a brief telegram from the department of the Dominion Lands at Ottawa through the Calgary office to "close the land office immediately," and did so. Beyond a notification that the deputy commissioner will call around in the near future to check up the books, there was no information as to the future handling of the business.

SEVERAL INCHES SNOW COVERS NORTH ALBERTA

TEMPERATURES DROP TO MID-
WINTER LEVEL IN WAKE OF NORTHWESTER

Last week the prairie country shivered in the clutch of the worst October storm in years. Down from the chilly north, a blustering snowstorm rolled into Alberta and Saskatchewan, piling white drifts high. Threshing is delayed in many areas and traffic in some cities was tied up by the snow-fall.

As much as seven inches of snow covered the fields in districts in Central and Northeastern Alberta. The snow-fall diminished to the south in Alberta and Saskatchewan. A storm raged for three days and a strong north wind sent into high drifts the snow-fall.

Between 80 and 85 per cent of the province's wheat crop has been threshed it is estimated, though little better than half is completed in northern sections. Good drying weather is urgently needed in the north.

Grades of the untrodden grain suffer due to bleaching, according to the report which mentions that sprouting has occurred in many fields in the northwest.

"The well is burned; now the Charley fortune belongs to me!" said "A Southern Cinderella" at the theatre, October 29th.

Mr. W. Rankin, of Vancouver, was in town over the week end on a visit to his daughter Mrs. J. Cuthbertson.

Mr. Toole, local superintendent of the Grain Growers' Co., has now located his family. Shop avenue was recently vacated by Mr. Geo. Petrie.

CHAS. H. HORN,
Sec. Wainwright Branch No. 29

It makes one feel somewhat sympathetic to read of the disaster which met the little village of Rosedale last week. The place was practically cleaned out by fire, only the hotel and one store being left standing in their business district.

CLAIMS DREAD T.B. CAN BE WIPED OUT

Should we try to cure tuberculosis? Most certainly, but it shouldn't be necessary, since tuberculosis can be prevented, points out Dr. John W. S. McCullough, M.D., D.P.H., in an article in the Canadian Magazine. In time, with proper measures, it could be wiped out, he believes, and its attendant ill effects and infection is spread by patients who for years carry the germs around with them, he tells.

In a paragraph telling exactly how this disease can be prevented, the doctor criticizes Canadian public health organizations.

"Prevention of tuberculosis," he writes, "must begin where the disease begins, that is with the child. The first procedure is to find the disease in children in the infective stage and prevent further development through the proper use of the tuberculin test. This test is a simple one, the only certain test of early tuberculosis that we have. Roughly it means the injection into the skin of a small amount of tuberculin—cubic centimeters, 0.1, in 1,000 dilution, and the observing if any reaction occurs. Such a test, properly carried out, is 100 per cent perfect. It would be worth while in the future interest of the public, both from an economical and social standpoint, to give the tuberculin test to every child in its early years. To do this requires a competent local health organization, which unfortunately is the exception in most Canadian communities."

"The important preventive measures for children not infected are the avoidance of contact with cases of open tuberculosis, particularly with those in the same house, the use of good food, life in the open air, and all the aids essential to the well-being of the child."

Some of the facts which the doctor discloses about the disease are as follows:

Probably nearly everyone has the infection at some time in his life. Since 1907, when England instituted school medical inspection, the disease has markedly declined in that country.

Tuberculosis is a germ disease. It is the result of the entry into the body of a germ known as the tubercle bacillus.

Contrary to common belief, the disease is not hereditary.

Most victims of the disease become infected in childhood though, the disease is being hereditary, the child is not born with it.

Milk is a common source of infection. Pasteurization overcomes this infection and makes the milk safe. Pasteurization should be universal and compulsory, the doctor claims.

COLLECTING SEEDS FOR PRAIRIE PLANT

CHILDREN OF DAUPHIN, AID IN WORK—GATHER MILLIONS OF TREE SEEDS

As a result of the efforts of the boys and girls of Dauphin, Manitoba, there will probably be several million new trees sprouting on Canada's western prairies next year. Again this year, as in many years past, the school children are helping Mr. F. J. Smith, Supervisor of the Riding Mountain Forest, to collect seeds from the Manitoba maple trees in the vicinity of Dauphin. After collection the seeds are shipped to the Forest Nursery Station at the Department of the Interior at Indian Head, Saskatchewan, where they are planted in seed beds to germinate. The seeds may be planted either in the autumn or the following spring and the next spring following, when they have been the seed bed eighteen or twenty months, the case may be the young seedlings are lifted and set out in the permanent plantation.

The seeds collected by the Dauphin children filled 139 sacks. This figure does not seem large and even 3,000 pounds (a ton and a half) is a reason why they do a proportion will be considered that a pound of Manitoba maple seed on an average contains 13,000 tree seeds the number of seeds in this collection reaches the astounding total of 39,754,000. Of course, many of these will not germinate and of those that do, a proportion will die without having reached maturity. Nevertheless it is a conservative estimate that as a result of the children's efforts over twenty million more maples will eventually help to beautify many farm homes in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

And Amos Peter didn't show up, even after Mammy had "spent six bits on de license and ober 'leven dollars for this yere bridal Cruise!" It's just too bad, as is explained in "A Southern Cinderella" Theatre, Oct. 29th.

FAMOUS MEDICOS TO VISIT WAINWRIGHT NOVEMBER 14th

Under the auspices of the Alberta medical association in conjunction with their Dominion body, two distinguished members of the medical faculty will arrive in the province on November 13th from McGill University. These specialists are Dr. L. H. McKim and Dr. C. C. Birchard, both high grade men in their specialising on infectious, fracture and heart troubles. They will be in residence at several places after visiting Edmonton, and will be in Wainwright on November 14th, and later will return to Montreal.

ALIENATION ISSUE IS BEING ARGUED

SASK. WANTS ACCOUNTING FOR RESOURCES SINCE 1870;
JUDGMENT RESERVED

OTTAWA—"The reference to the Supreme Court of Canada to decide whether the Dominion government has to account to the province of Saskatchewan for natural resources within that province alienated between 1870 and 1905 is argued here. In handing back the natural resources to the province the Dominion held that it should only account for any resources disposed of after the province was formed in 1905. Across the province took the ground the accounting should extend back to 1870 when the Dominion first came into possession of the territory which now forms the province of Saskatchewan.

The finding in this case will also apply to the other prairie provinces. At the conclusion of the argument of the counsel for Saskatchewan, the court reserved judgment without calling upon counsel for the Dominion.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE HOLD ANNUAL BAZAAR

Owing possibly to the severity of the weather, the annual bazaar arranged by the local members of the W.I. in the Masonic hall last Saturday did not attract a large crowd although those who attended were well repaid for their presence. Some half-dozen stalls were well filled with both fancy and useful articles, candy, etc., and a drawing for a beautifully dressed doll attracted many to "try their luck!" Afternoon tea was served and a pleasant time spent over the bazaar. Miss M. Prosser was the holder of the lucky ticket for the doll.

AGED DIST. RESIDENT PASSES TO REWARD

MRS. KATIE CAPPS DIES AFTER SUDDEN SEIZURE OF PNEUMONIA

On Friday last, Mrs. Katie Capps, who had been a resident of this district for many years, passed away at the home of her son, Mr. Harry French, pneumonia being the cause of death. The deceased lady was in her 80th year.

She was born in Tennessee, U.S.A. and came to Alberta over 20 years ago to live with her son Harry, after the demise of her second husband. Until one week ago she was enjoying her usual good health, but a cold from which she suffered turned to her fatal illness.

One son, Fred, pre-deceased her, but there are left to mourn three other sons, those being James, in Missouri, Robert, in Oklahoma, and Harry of Wainwright.

THE FUNERAL

was held at the United church on Monday afternoon, when a large gathering of friends and sympathizers turned out to pay their last respects. Rev. W. J. Huston, the pastor, conducted the service, and several well known hymns were sung by those present. Among the floral tributes were from the Wainwright family, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Stuart and Vera, etc. McLeod's parlors handled the arrangements, and the interment was made at Wainwright cemetery, the pallbearers being Messrs R. Sharp, H. Walker, J. W. Stuart and A. Hutchinson.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire to express our sincere thanks to all kind friends and neighbors for the loving sympathy shown in our sad bereavement by the death of Mrs. Capps.

DRA TIC OFFERING GIVES VISIT TO MEXICALI

TALKIE AT ELITE THIS WEEK
SHOWS GIRL GAMBLING
WITH HEART LOVE

Happy Manning, notorious gambler, made his young brother, Bob, to college; the money for his education coming from a dive on the Mexicali border. "Happy" tells the boy he is owner of a gold mine.

Bob makes good and falls in love with and wins the affections of Marie, a pretty girl of good family. "Happy" congratulates himself upon the fact that the boy is lunched on the road to success. However, he had not taken into consideration the vindictive plans of a discarded sweetheart, "Mexicali Rose."

"Happy" had driven the girl "Mexicali Rose" from her resort on London Road. She decided to avenge herself by striking at "Happy" through the boy. "Mexicali Rose" seeks the boy out and persuades him to marry her. "Happy" knows nothing of it.

"Happy" gets a wire from Bob announcing his marriage and thinking that Bob has married Marie "Happy" is delighted. When Bob arrives with his wife "Mexicali Rose," "Happy" is horrified. Determined to "bury" "Happy" further, Rose resumes her promiscuous behavior as soon as she arrives on the border. One night "Happy" learns of a rendezvous Rose has planned and he gives Rose a sleeping potion to prevent her carrying it out.

At dawn the girl is found dead. "Happy" is terrified but developments prove that she was stabbed by "Loco" a faithful servant of the gambler.

The tragedy does not disrupt business at the gambling dive. Even while Bob becomes the guest of his bride, the voice of the croupier is heard chanting: "It's the Wheel of Chance, Ladies and Gentlemen—some times you win—sometimes you lose—but always you get a run for your money!"

And there is much more that will entertain you if you see this 100 p.c. talkie on Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Elite theatre.

No other changes in the western strength of the force are anticipated at the present time, said Commissioner Starnes. The detachment at Ellmers Land and Baffin Land on the eastern shore of the Canadian Arctic and at the other outposts at a farther west Arctic outposts have been replaced for the coming season and the redcoats are carrying on at various points at which the famous force is represented throughout the Dominion.

Mr. E. Mahoney, who for the past two years has been teaching at the Glen schoolhouse, left last week for his home in Edmonton. We understand that he has taken another school.

Without Meat You Are Living On A "Restricted Diet"

In the animal kingdom, too, the carnivora are outstanding for their physical development and nervous strength; for example, the lion, and the tiger amongst the mammals. The eagle, which exists on meat only, lives to the greatest age amongst birds.

Meat-eating stimulates the intellect, strengthens man physically and assists in combating disease. A well balanced diet must include a reasonable quantity of meat daily. Without it you are living on a "restricted diet" which is a common cause of ill health.

MEHMET THE RED

They did indeed, though they liked neither the dancing nor the piping. For day by day Mehmet grew more and more the steel-rattling ruf fan. Too his greed for money was outrageous so that finally the patience of the Hindus reached the breaking point, and there were excited words when people gathered at the market:

'Here is this Moslem bully gobbling our food, stealing our goods—' 'Aye! He is swaggering about in my grand yellow boots!' 'And my new cloak!'

'Last night he drank two bottles of my finest Persian wine!' 'Ah, the Moslem—the dirt-eating infidel!' 'Who, he pleased not to forget, interrupted the almskaka, was the Grand Vizier's signet ring.'

'The ring which doubtless is a forgery.'

'But which protects us against greater robbers.'

'A forgery just the same,' insisted the grocer. 'I shall go to the Grand Vizier.'

'And risk the bastinado and an enormous fine.'

'Better bastinado and fine than the indignities which Mehmet heaps upon our heads! This afternoon I shall talk to the Grand Vizier.'

Fadnavati heard. She warned Mehmet who said, 'Excellent,' and went at once to the Grand Vizier's palace where a captain was mounting guard and he out with his sword as the other drew near.

Mehmet smiled.

'Speaking about friendship,' he began, 'and gold—'

'Whose?'

'Your friendship—because of my gold.' A well filled purse changed hands. 'I have your friendship.'

'Absolutely. What can I do for you.'

Mehmet told him and the soldier inclined his head.

'Consider it done. Only—a word of advice; sooner or later the Grand Vizier's spies will find out about the ring.'

'The very thing I fear!' 'You've enough money. Why do you not leave?'

'Because of a girl.'

'Whom you love?'

'Whom I used to love—and whom I gave a certain promise. He explained, adding: 'I wish there was a way there is,' laughed the other, and spoke at length.

'You are quite sure about this law?'

'And you will tell the grocer?'

'Yes.'

'May the Prophet bless you, O just man!' said Mehmet, then quickly he slipped around the corner as the grocer approached—to be met by the captain's thunderous command:

'Stop, dog!'

Sri Madho saluted.

'I crave audience with the Grand Vizier.'

'Again a purse changed hands. 'I shall arrange it for you,' promised the captain. 'I suppose there is something you wish to sell to the Grand Vizier?'

'No, I want to make a complaint.'

'Against whom—may I ask?'

'A certain Mehmet.'

'Mehmet?' echoed the other, raising an eyebrow. 'You mean Mehmet the Red?'

'The same. A thief he is, a robber. 'Huah!' came the abrupt whisper. 'Have a care! Why—why, superiorly—the is the Grand Vizier's dearest friend. The Grand Vizier gave him his signet ring in token of'

The grocer started to run away. But the captain called him back: 'Wait! What has Mehmet done? And as the other hesitated: 'You can trust me. I too have reasons for hating him.'

Sri Madho told him. 'I would cut off my right hand to get rid of him!' he wound up; and the captain replied: 'I can help you.'

'If you only would! My gratitude—' 'Can be easily expressed. There is a ruby in your turban—'

'Here you are!'

The captain's palm closed about the stone and he explained to the grocer the same law he had explained to Mehmet.

'It is the ancient law of High Tartary,' he went on. 'None may break it. Not even the Grand Khan himself.'

That is what an hour later, the grocer repeated to the citizens in the almskaka house adding:

'The information would have been cheaply purchased—even had the ruby been genuine—which it was not. It is a very law to settle this matter. The law which says that when a community, Hindu or Moslem, decided that a man is the enemy of peace, anyone, Hindu, Moslem or Christian, native-born or foreigner, can challenge him to combat by wrestling, not steel. And if the disturber of peace be defeated, he must never return to the community.'

'But who is there, demanded the almskaka, 'to stand up against this Mehmet and defeat him.'

'I' shouted the grocer.

'I' echoed the fruiterer.

'I' II II' chimed in tailor and innkeeper and a dozen others.

'And I,' said Fadnavati from the threshold of the inner apartment.

'I shall be the messenger and bring the challenge to Mehmet.'

She did so that same day; and he replied:

Good! At noon in the market square, I shall wrestle the bold, bold just who wins?'

Noon came and the market square was crowded. And then Mehmet approached. He slipped off his robe—and there was the dramatic appearance of an immense torso, bare but for a loincloth, of arms and legs packed with a fantastic layer of muscles, of a short neck like a bull's. If he had seemed large before now, without clothes he seemed a giant, and silence came over the gathering, silence that grew tense and shivering as he dropped into a crouch, his hands jerking out like the paws of a bear; as he roared: 'Allah! There will be this day a grand breaking of bones! Come on—whoever is the challenger!'

And then—there happened that which for years was spoken of with jeering laughter throughout the High Tartary. For nobody accepted the challenge.

'This morning,' said the fruiterer 'I sprained my ankle.'

'My cough bothers me,' said the grocer.

The innkeeper was the most honest.

'Let him wrestle who will,' he declared reasonably. 'I refuse.'

Fadnavati faced the younger men and said:

'In the past many of you have asked my hand in marriage. Listen then to my promise! Whoever wrestles and defeats this arrogant stranger, his bride I shall be on the morrow.'

'Give out! She turned to her father 'You agree?'

'Yes, I too give out.'

'Is there not one amongst you,' demanded Fadnavati, 'not one who—'

'I am! I voice out in; and Grigor

Here and There

Successful Canadian exhibitors in the International Grain and Hay Show to be held at Chicago, November 23-December 6, will be awarded liberal bonuses in addition to the regular premiums offered in the prize list now being distributed. The provincial governments of Quebec, Ontario, Alberta, Saskatchewan and British Columbia, the Calgary Board of Trade and the Canadian Pacific Railway have also announced offers of special awards for Canadian exhibitors.

That elk are attracted by music seems to be established by the actions of two fine specimens of that animal which stroll out of the bandstand during the evening. When dancing begins at the bandstand, the elk begin to dance. Under the ballroom windows they begin to shake their heads and prance, cavort and caper while the music lasts, not even stopping to eat until the orchestra has ceased playing.

Canadian poultry are rapidly being recruited throughout the world as reaching unusually high standards and recently the S.S. Empress of Canada, leaving from Vancouver to China, Japan and the Philippines, carried 60 head of registered white leghorns consigned to Manila to be used in building up the poultry industry of the islands. The birds came from a poultry farm near Vancouver.

Captain R. W. McMurray, for the past five years marine superintendent of the Canadian Pacific's British Columbia coast steamship service at Vancouver and prior to that a commander with the Canadian Pacific trans-Pacific fleet, has been assigned in the London Times of July 14, captain in the Royal Naval Reserve, promoted from the rank of commander, R.N.R. Captain McMurray, whose rank is equivalent to the army rank of brigadier-general, is one of the few living Canadians holding such a high position in the R.N.R.

The province of Manitoba last month celebrated its sixtieth birthday. Where 60 years ago the buffalo reigned alone, Manitoba farmers are now pasturing 360,000 horses and 830,000 cattle and the prairie dweller instead of returning to fort or wigwam from his day's work, spends his evenings in his radio-equipped home or motors over good highways to the nearest city.

About a thousand tons of zinc concentrates from Field, B.C., on the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, were shipped to Japan recently, this being part of a movement of 1,500 tons monthly from a mine which started five months ago and which ships lead concentrate to California.

Nearly 12,000 extra men are finding employment this summer in the Canadian Pacific Railway program of construction, maintenance and improvement from coast to coast of the Dominion. Program includes laying of branch lines, repairing and renovating of right of way, bridges, tunnels, stations and other buildings. The men in general are recruited as near as possible to the scene of work and kept steadily employed until each job is finished.

stopped up.

'A Christian!'

'What seek you here, O accursed!'

Grigor waited until the storm had subsided.

'Word came to me,' he said; and indeed an hour earlier Mehmet had brought him such word, 'that a man is needed to wrestle this Mehmet!'

Mehmet turned to Grigor: 'Come on, my little cockerel! he invited, moving in ponderously, bravely arms describing slow arabesques. Then, as strong body, met strong body he whispered: 'Be careful! Let me not lose my temper! Or I may forget that this is in jest—and hurt you!'

For quite a while they wrestled—wrestled after the Tartan manner, in which there are no forbidden holds or holds of any sort; wrestling to which the kicking foot, the up-jerked knee, the biting teeth, the young thumb—all and everything is permitted.

It will always remain a debatable question if, throughout, it was a clever or make-up, or if, perhaps, after they warmed to the game, they battled in earnest. On this point the two opponents disagreed.

For later on Grigor told his wife: 'Never a chance did he have. I could have thrown him quite early in the fight. But I wanted a bit of fun.'

Mehmet on the other hand, told certain friends:

'I let him throw me. Had I not promised Fadnavati? But some day I shall return to Samarkand, and take the Christian up to the woods and—ah—the things I shall do to him!'

Divergent views.

At all events, there was suddenly a scream, and a heave—and Mehmet's great body coming up, above Grigor's head, hurtling grotesquely. Then a crash—and Mehmet flat on the ground, both shoulders touching the earth—and at once Fadnavati rushed up to Grigor and cried:

'The victor! The victor!'

So, since law is a law, there was the next morning long-drawn, quivering yells of 'Yoo-yoo-yoo! Yoo-yoo-yoo! Happy life to the bridegroom! Happy life to the bride! as Fadnavati and Grigor went to the Hindu temple to receive the priests blessing, while Mehmet the Red was once more on his way across the fine broad world.

A Needle In The Haystack

BY MARJORIE WEIR

It was great good luck. Jimmie had said, 'You can take my car for the week, I am going up North.' It was generous of Jimmie. It was also the solution to numerous problems. Holiday time! Every place one wanted to visit was either too far away, or else too crowded. 'I want to go somewhere and forget everything in town,' was Mary's thought.

It was a bright cool morning, with dew on the little patch of grass outside the apartment door, and a haze over the city that meant heat. Mary's heart was just about thumping the buttons of her suit with excitement! Everything was ready. Her bag was packed with clothes for comfort and rainy days and two flowery frocks—just in case!

After considering the problem of a holiday Mary decided that the only thing to do was to give up the thought of having a gay time and just find some place to rest in the country.

Jane, her aunt said, 'Take the Sherbrooke highway, branch off at Waterloo and keep on the winding road until you come to a farm house with red chimneys, green shutters and willow trees. Oh well, it must be somewhere and she wouldn't mind adventuring.

At last she was on the road. The miles flew by. At lunch Mary pulled up under a cross road sign and ate her lunch, while gold finches darted overhead and the breath of clover passed by. Then on again—content to be just moving away from the city from her advertising office, from her little apartment.

About four o'clock Jane's road appeared but then the fun began! There were several neat farm houses with red chimneys, any one of which might be the one.

Perhaps Mary had been dreaming when she passed the last gas station. Anyway the car stopped and there was no doubt that she just couldn't go without gas. There is all the difference in the look of a road when the car is running smoothly and when it is stopped. Just before the car stopped, the road looked to be a beautiful, short, utterly enchanting road—then suddenly it was long and lonely and gloomy, because the sun was low and the trees were high. No one was in sight. She got out, went over to the fence, climbed up and stood looking over the landscape in a gap of the wooded place—one farm house—no use going there—you can tell from the waiting hanging out on the line! Mary got down and walked along the road for a little way, then got an inspiration. She would above the car along fifty yards or so, coast down the hill and see where fate landed her. After much rocking and shoving the car started down the hill and Mary sat back well pleased with herself. Slowly and slower the car came finally to a standstill outside an overgrown cedar hedge and Mary sat there wondering what would happen next. It was a beautiful twilight. Somewhere near frogs piped. After all, thought Mary, there are houses if no cars pass this way. She got out, found some place to stay overnight, and she began to imagine some nice kindly old lady in grey—with a white apron, offering her a delicious tea. Mary was just beginning to imagine the smell of toast and to open a fresh boiled egg when a voice said at the opposite window.

'Nice evening.'

'It's a lovely evening,' Mary replied, and she saw a big farmer with bronzed face and heavy capable arms peering in.

'The car just stopped,' said Mary. 'I suppose it needs gas.'

'I'll have a look,' said the young man.

'That's all,' he said, returning, 'just gas. How far had you intended to go?'

'Why I'm looking for a farmhouse with a red chimney and green shutters and willow trees.... but they all have them!'

The man turned around to look and sure enough over the tall hedge there was a distant red chimney.

'What else besides a red chimney, green shutters and willow trees?' asked the man.

'Oh ducks and cows and.... oh there was something else, only Jane said I would soon know. I really should have asked what the other thing was! You see this is my holiday. I've come to stay and have a rest in the country.' She added this because the young man was staring at her so.

'Well.... this is a good place right here. I've got all those things.... and maybe something else besides. There's a windmill—would that do?'

'It might,' laughed Mary back at the young farmer. 'I'm hungry,' said Mary suddenly.

At that the young man said, 'If you would care to go through the gap in the hedge over there, or around by the gate, if you'd rather, you can see the red chimney for yourself and ask for some tea, and I will get you a gallon of gas from my car and bring her to the door for you.'

The gap in the hedge was the easiest, the man disappeared. The house stood beckoning her on. There was no answer at the front door, there was at the back and soon Mary was enjoying the boiled eggs and toast and being served by a very pretty old lady, whose husband sat on the back porch reading the news and smoking a pipe of good tobacco. The last rays of the sun came streaming through the window. The kitchen was spotlessly clean. There were pink geraniums in the window. But the young farmer did not appear.

There was room. She could stay. Jane was not mentioned. It was so nice Mary wanted to imagine she had found it all by herself.

The young farmer had completely hidden himself. On going out she found the car safely settled, in a small garage, a little way from the house. Even it looked at home and unwilling to venture out. But there was no sign of the young man!

The little bedroom in the eaves was quite as neat and comfortable as any picture one. A willow spread her arms outside the window and just before Mary put out the light that night a white-throated sparrow sang. 'And once again the scene has changed.' Mary had heard it often in its more familiar song of 'I love Canada Canada, Canada.' Peace.

When Mary woke next morning there was a thrill in her heart, a delicious feeling of something wonderful going to happen. After a wonderful breakfast the morning was spent in looking over the farm laughing with the old lady, helping to gather vegetables for the lunch, a trip to the next village for gas and exploration. Evening and a longing to return. She still the young farmer did not appear!

The week flew by. Only at a distance did the young farmer pass by. He was always busy—often singing as he worked—then at night he would disappear. Mary felt neglected and yet she did not want to go away. Twice the man in the morning and each time the thumping in her heart as she looked at him prevented her from speaking. It was his eyes that shone into her; she had to look far away over the hills and then he laughed and walked away. Even the flower dresses in the morning when he was about could not induce him to remain. He simply disappeared. Then Mary knew she was alone. She thought, 'She knew nothing about him or where he lived. There Mary thought how well she looked and remembered the thin pale men she knew in town, the parties she went to, the money it took to go to the city, the heartache and loneliness of it all. Then always expecting to meet someone real and only discover something empty, something shabby and meaningless.

Mary was wandering through the orchard one evening. She had not bothered to put on her flowery dress. She was in her plain jersey and a rough towel skirt, and her hair was tossed with the branches, a little leafy clump to her hair. 'Strange and the country makes you see your self,' she thought. 'The importance of the city just vanishes. These are the real things—apples growing, silence in the evening. A little cosy home place to return to. Cheerful women and men who could do things for you. I wish he would come. I do want to speak to him.'

Mary perched herself on the old wooden fence and looked down the valley at the changing lights and shadows. The hills were almost purple in the distance. The nearer ones were black. There was a silence that held all sorts of whisperings and sounds. A voice said, 'Have you found something else?'

The young farmer at last!

Mary caught herself from falling for the young man did not, and felt her face burning.

'I was just beginning to wonder,' said Mary mysteriously.

'There are more houses nearby with red chimneys, green shutters and willow trees. Have you tried them—maybe they have the something else?'

'It's like looking for a needle in a haystack. This something else Jane spoke of.'

'Perhaps she meant there was something else if you knew what to look for.'

Mary turned and looked at him. She noticed his bronzed skin, his tanned hair, his old khaki shirt and grey slacks—then she saw his hands on the fence beside her. They were so smooth and clean—well cared for, shapely hands.

'Do all farmers speak in riddles as you do?'

'There is no riddle. I am simply delving into a little philosophy—there is something else if you know what you want.'

'What do I want,' said Mary to herself, half questioningly.

'Jane told me what you wanted long ago,' this audacious farmer answered.

'What! Jane told you! And suddenly all the things she had told me came tumbling about her ears. She was alarmed. I thought you were just a farmer. She stared at him as if he had suddenly come up out of the ground like Jack's bean stalk.

'That's what I am—just a farmer. Oh no! Don't repeat it like that! I mean—'

'I know what you mean—farmers have no imaginations—they're just farmers.... well that's all I am—but I happen to have lived in the (Continued on Page Six)

FINDERS ARE KEEPERS

BY ELIZABETH CHURCH

One more call to make, Mary Norton told herself as she ran up the driveway to the room. 'And then, as Jim says, I'll do my social service and become a whirling dervish once more.'

The three children did not see her as she pushed open the door and looked in. They were huddled together in a frightened little hunch. 'Mummy had not answered when they had told her they were hungry. She had only moaned and turned away, so that their hearts were full of fear, for they remembered dimly that awful day when daddy, all cold and white, had been taken away, never to come back again.'

Mary closed the door behind her. Five-year-old Billy, followed by the smaller tots, Bobbie and Janie, rushed to meet her.

'Click! Click! A shower of golden coins fell from their hands and rolled to the corners of the room.'

'What are these?' exclaimed Mary. In amazement she gathered up one, two, three..... a handful of gold pieces, Canadian twenty dollar coins.

'Shiny cents,' said Billy, holding up his handful of glittering money.

'Shiny, shiny cents,' lisped Bobbie and Janie in joyful imitation.

Mary walked over to the bed and leaned over the sick woman. Mrs. Norton did not open her eyes, taking her thermometer from her medical kit Mary learned from the temperature that the fever was very high indeed.

A look around the room and a glance into the empty cupboard showed her that the children must be almost starving. Only the fact that their flat was heated from the rooms below had kept warmth in the little flat.

'If I had only come yesterday as I had planned to do,' she reproached herself as she ran down the stairs. 'It's all Jimmie's fault. He would insist upon going to see his old factory.'

At the nearest telephone she called up the Settlement Office and asked that a doctor might be sent at once, and that the nurse would arrange for food brought in at the same time as her own arrival. She herself would stay until help was established in the flat.

Then back once more, in the dreary room, she questioned Billy about the gold coins, but 'pretty shiny cents,' was all that he could say and a man gave Billy shiny cents.

Together they picked up fourteen of the coins and made a neat golden pile upon the table. Eager to help in the new game, Billy dragged across the floor an old ragged hassock. In its day it had been an artistic footstool of needlepoint and beads. But now from one great hole the padding spewed.

'Look! Shiny cents!' He put in his hand and pulled out two more of the coins.

Mary picked up the old footstool placed a newspaper under it and pulled out every bit of padding. The coins fell clinking down.

'Oh! Oh!' cried the children. 'Shiny cents! Shiny cents!'

With her penknife Mary slit the seams of the woolwork and two more coins fell out. She shook it briskly. Nothing more!

She re-arranged the piles upon the table. Fifty in all! One thousand dollars in gold!

When the settlement nurse and the doctor came in, she showed them the money and the mysterious footstool in which it had been hidden.

'I'd take it to the Bank at once, before closing hours, Miss Arnton' said the doctor, 'until you can find out something about it.'

'We'll ask Mrs. Norton first,' said Mary. 'I've been coming here for some time, and I'm sure she will be as much amazed as I am. I never saw this hassock before.'

Presently, revived by the medicine given her by the nurse, Mrs. Norton told Mary the little she knew of the old footstool. Billy brought it in about two weeks ago. It had fallen from a truckload of secondhand furniture and the driver of the truck told him he might keep it.

And that was all that Mary could learn of the Mystery of the Golden Coins. She left the settlement house in a very puzzled state of mind.

She had not gone half a block toward the tram car when a yellow roadster drew up beside her and Jim Danforth's gay voice called, 'I've been searching up and down here for the last half hour, looking for you. Know this was your district on Saturday morning?' He held the door open.

'The Bank, James!' she said with dignity as she seated herself beside him.

'Yes, mum, thank you, mum!' he mocked. 'But why the onslaught on a bank? Need funds?'

'I have one thousand dollars in gold in this bag!' Excitedly she told him the whole story ending up with 'and you know, Jimmie, those children were actually starving, and if Mrs. Norton died, it will be all your fault.'

'My fault! Ye gods!'

'Yes, if you hadn't made me go with you yesterday to look at that Stone House near your factory, I should have gone to see Mrs. Norton and.....'

'Cut out the grousing woman! I took you out to see the Stone House because I'm going to buy it for your home. There is a great chance for a Club House in that old farmhouse by which would fit in with the needs of the workers in the factories. All kinds of possibilities for this social service work you are so mad about. When we are married you will have a wonderful time managing it.'

'Now look here, Jimmie! I only became engaged to you because you promised not to bother me about getting married. I'm twenty-two, free with a career of my own ahead.....'

'Call this stunning a career!' he frowned. 'Every time I hunt you up in the quarter of the city I feel like joking you up!'

'Smiley! That sort of talk went out with the Stone Age! I'll make a bargain with you! You find the owner of the golden coins and persuade him to give them to Mrs. Norton. Then I'll think seriously about marrying you.'

'Find an old miser who hid his gold in a footstool! With a five-year old boy as a chief helper. You are the most unreasonable girl!'

Mary giggled. She had done what she had intended to do from the very first—she had broken the burden of finding an owner for the money from her own puzzled mind to the efficient brain of the amiable Mr. Danforth.

'It won't be so very hard,' she said.

'It won't be so very hard,' she said.

'It won't be so very hard,' she said.

'It won't be so very hard,' she said.

said, 'You can hire a squad of detectives and they'll soon run the foot stool to earth! Here we are at the Bank!'

A week passed during which Jimmie Danforth spent many hours trying to learn more about the old foot stool. At length he learned the name of the driver of the truck who had given the mysterious treasure to Billy. He had been given the orders, he said by the order of the tenement, to remove the few furnishings of a tenant who had recently died. He had good naturedly given the shabby small seat to the little boy. The owner of the flats could give very little information. An old man named Henry Hutton had lived there. Apparently had no relatives. He had died in the Civic Hospital, had been buried in the public cemetery, an Englishman but seventy years of age. Always paid his rent regularly. And that was all Jimmie could learn.

Then early in the following week, sitting beside Mary at a dinner party, a bright light fell upon his dark problem.

As they took their places at the table, the man on Mary's left said, 'I'm in the Bank. Aren't you the young lady who deposited a thousand dollars in gold a week ago? We see so few gold deposits that the teller spoke to me about the odd way in which you found it.'

Mary told her story vividly, and Jimmie listened eagerly as the Bank manager said, thoughtfully,

'Ah, in twentier, certainly very odd. Some years ago when I was a teller in the Bank a queer old chap, an Englishman, would come in every month with English notes and asked to have them changed into Canadian gold—'

NEW ALBERTA
AIRLINE OPENS
IN DECEMBER

OTTAWA—The early part of December, the superintendent of aerial mail services announces, will see the inauguration of the new and improved aerial mail to and from Edmonton. The present route to Edmonton is now from Moose Jaw through North Battleford. By the new plan, Edmonton will be linked up with Calgary and Lethbridge. Its air mails will go through that way.

SASKATCHEWAN GOVT
ASSISTS FARMERS TO GET FEEDER CATTLE

REGINA—The Saskatchewan government already has offered substantial assistance to farmers of the province desirous of obtaining feeder stock for the winter months. Hon. W. C. Budge, minister of agriculture, said on Monday. A further reduction in railway freight rates, he added, required the farmer to pay only 50 per cent of freight costs on the stock.

It was considered unlikely by Mr. Budge that any portion of the Dominion government relief grant to the province, $500,000 of which was to be used for farmers whose crops had failed, would be used to further reduce rates on stock to Saskatchewan farmers.

POOL WHEAT
PAYMENT IS CUT 5 CENTS

WINNIPEG—Initial payment on wheat has been cut from 60 cents per bushel to 55 cents, according to an announcement by the Canadian Wheat Pool. Fifty-five cents is to be the payment on No. 1 Northern, basic Fort William, until further notice.

No statement accompanied the announcement, officials of the general selling agency remarking that no comment was required when the market prices on completely demoralized world markets were no closer to the pool's initial payment.

IMMIGRATION IS CUT TO MINIMUM BY BAN

OTTAWA—When the immigration ban will be lifted no one knows because it all depends upon the nebulous date when conditions improve, but meanwhile the influx of new arrivals to Canada is at practically irreducible minimum.

The restrictions were put on as one of the early actions of the new government. Meanwhile, the figures have not been published, but the department immigration was described "as only a trickle." The order operates to the exclusion of practically everyone save those from Great Britain and its dominions or the United States, except families coming to join the heads already here.

TRANS-CANADA HIGH-WAY COMING

Early completion of the trans-Canada Highway was envisaged in the annual presidential report of Dr. E. P. Doolittle at the 17th convention of the Canadian Automobile Association at Vancouver recently. Dr. Doolittle believed that development of the Trans-Canada Highway as a national undertaking was not improbable. Dr. Doolittle was elected again to the presidency of the Automobile Association.

HUGE ARMY OF 15,000
DEMAND SARGON DAILY

Vast Growing Army of Sargon Users Marching Single File, Would Enfilade Globe in Only Few Years Time.

(By Richard L. Simms)

ATLANTA, GA.—More like a tale from the Arabian Nights of old than a record of modern business achievement reads the story of the marvelous growth and development of Sargon the New Scientific Compound which has become the sensation of the drug trade throughout Canada, the United States and other countries.

The old illustration of the pebble dropped into the pool best describes the phenomenal and unprecedented demand and its fame is rapidly spreading over the entire Continent. Recently compiled figures reveal that approximately 15,000 men and women are marching into drug stores daily for Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills, the marvelous new treatment that is restoring health to count less thousands by new and remarkable methods undreamed of only a few years ago.

Already more than 5,000,000 suffering men and women have put it to the test and have told other millions what it has done for them.

Marching regulation army fashion—single file—this vast army of Sargon users would reach from New York to San Francisco and at the present rate of sale, would, in a few years time, encircle the entire globe. The only explanation of Sargon's triumph in the Medicine World is Sargon's true worth. Back of its triumph in the drug stores is its triumph in the homes and it is the grateful endorsements of its millions of users that has made it the most widely talked of medicine in the world today.

Sargon is extensively advertised it is true, but no preparations, no matter how extensively advertised, could possibly meet with such phenomenal success unless it possessed an extraordinary power as a medicine.

There can be but one possible explanation for Sargon's amazing success and it can be told in one word—MERIT!

Sargon may be obtained in Wainwright from the Wainwright Pharmacy.

ALBERTA RICH IN VARIED RESOURCES

A visit to the Peace River country and then to Turner Valley impresses one forcibly with the tremendous resources of Alberta, and leads one to believe that the future of the country is very bright, according to R. Creelman, passenger traffic manager of the Canadian National Railways.

Wainwright, who made a business trip through Alberta this month.

Mr. Creelman expressed surprise at the oilfield since his previous visit, a year ago. One of the many interesting things Mr. Creelman witnessed in the Peace River country was the extraordinary interest being taken in turkey raising by the farmers of that district. The climate and conditions generally are ideal for raising turkeys and he saw large flocks of healthy, fine looking birds almost everywhere he went.

They are an optimistic people and they have the right spirit. They have an excellent grain crop and there is a very little evidence of any business depression as seen by Mr. Creelman.

What Shall We Name The Baby?

A SYMPOSIUM BY INTERESTING PEOPLE OF TODAY
CONDUCTED BY WILLIAM A. LEWIN

To select a suitable name for each new baby this comes into the world is indeed an absorbing problem. Nearly 2,000,000 new babies were born last year. And yet there are less than 1,000 names to choose from. Parents search telephone directories for suggestions. Shall we create some interesting new names?

No. 30—JANE COWL

I have always favored the names Mary and John. Their simple dignity and associations appeal to me.

MARTIN is a name of Latin origin meaning "of Mars." The name is indeed an absorbing problem. Nearly 2,000,000 new babies were born last year. And yet there are less than 1,000 names to choose from. Parents search telephone directories for suggestions. Shall we create some interesting new names?

BAKED LAMB STEAKS

Trim and remove extra fat from lamb steaks cut from the shoulder. Rub them with salt and pepper, brown on both sides in lamb fat, and place in a casserole. Rinse frying pan with 1/2 cup hot water and add this liquid to the meat. Cover dish tightly and bake meat in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 1 1/2 hours. If desired, finely chopped vegetables such as onions, carrots, turnips, and mushrooms may be added to the meat in the casserole the last half hour. When done, remove a meat from the dish. Make a gravy and serve. Lamb is never out of season.

TOWN PLANNING IN THIS PROVINCE

Being a series of short articles explanatory of the provisions of the Alberta Town Planning Act and Regulations thereunder.

By HORACE L. SEYMOUR
Provincial Director of Town Planning

Article 7.

Farmstead Planning

The term "farmstead" is used to include that part of the farm that takes in the house and its grounds, barnyard and buildings. Planning for such an area has become an important part of the work of the Provincial Town Planning Office; over 50 inspections or surveys were made in 1929, with assistance from some of the district agriculturists of the province.

General principles of farmstead planning are illustrated by typical diagrams, and include such matters as placing and grouping of buildings, sanitation and planting of trees, shrubs and flowers—plans that might take several years to become fully effective, but ones that can be worked to.

Individual plans are prepared for particular locations where, as a rule, some permanent buildings have already been erected, and the suggested lay-out is consequently influenced thereby.

Those who wish to procure trees for shelter belts or windbreaks free of cost should communicate with Mr. Norman M. Ross, before the first of March in the year preceding that in which they wish to plant. As supplied, poplars and willows are cuttings, maple, ash and cavanara are seedlings. For conifers or evergreens, such as Scotch pine or white spruce there is a charge of $3.00 per hundred, together with the usual express or freight charges.

There is no charge for the Provincial planning service, and those farmers interested should communicate with the Director of Town Planning, Parliament Buildings, Edmonton.

Surveys of individual farms will be made and plans subsequently prepared as soon as practicable.

AND EVERYONE WAS FINALLY SATISFIED—MAYBE

The Daily Chronicle of Georgetown, British Guiana, reports a peculiar situation arising at a funeral in that city, as follows:

"The appearance of two sets of hearse, coffin, mourners and nuptials' carriages and the other trappings, from rival undertakers, at the funeral of Richard Boston, a butcher, at 108 Upper Charlotte St., Bourda, was an unusual scene in the city yesterday afternoon.

"It is stated that Boston, who died at the Public Hospital yesterday, was a member of the Sons of Consolation Society, but instead of permitting the funeral arrangements to be made by the society as usual, his relatives engaged the General Undertaking Department to supply the 'turn out.' In the meanwhile, the secretary of the society made arrangements with the Queenstown Stables, with the result that the two sets of hearse, etc., turned up at the deceased's residence as mentioned above.

Health Service of the CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

CLEAN HANDS

Our hands are in constant use, and in the course of a few hours, they come in contact with a considerable number of articles. It is because our hands are used so much and that they are constantly almost sure to be soiled, that, unless properly cared for, they may be our greatest enemies.

In previous articles we have stated that the germs of disease leave the body in its secretions. The secretions from the nose and mouth are those which most frequently carry disease. We should always deal with such secretions as if we knew them to contain disease germs. The spread of disease depends upon whether the germ-laden secretion from one person gains entrance into the body of another person.

The spread of disease may be direct, as when the germs are transferred by the droplets which are thrown out into the air by uncovered coughs and sneezes. It may also be indirect, and it is in the indirect spread that the hands play an important part.

In considering the indirect spread there are two important points to be kept in mind. Disease germs die comparatively quickly outside the body. They require heat and moisture to preserve their lives; drying destroys them, and sunlight kills them.

What we have to fear are the fresh, moist secretions. As our hands are warm and humid, germs can and do persist on them for some time.

In using the handkerchief, in covering a cough with the hand, we are almost sure to soil our hands with the nose and mouth secretions. If we then shake hands with someone, we transfer some of our secretions to the hand of that person. If our hands are soiled, we soil objects which we touch, such as a door-knob, someone else may touch these objects after we do, and so, indirectly, the nose and mouth secretions of one person are passed to the hands of another.

There is no reason, however, why this should alarm us. It has, nevertheless, a very practical lesson for us, and it is the purpose of this article to bring this lesson to the attention of our readers.

As long as disease germs remain on the hands, they cannot do us any harm. We can quite readily protect ourselves from the dangers with which our hands may threaten us.

First of all we should keep our hands away from our faces, except when using a handkerchief, or when eating, or using a toothbrush. It is a dangerous habit, that of touching the face, and particularly the lips, with the hands.

Most important, however, is that the hands should always be kept washed before food is touched. He member always to do this, and you will have put into practice a habit which will do much to protect you from disease.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College St., Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

A NEEDLE IN THE HAYSTACK

"This," said he, pointing to his house, his red chimney, his green shutters, his yellow trees and to the distant hills, "is the only life, and I want someone to share it."

Mary looked away over his fields. Why had Jane sent her here—but was it Jane? Maybe Jimmie was in the scheme too—well she just would not be shoved into things! But had she been shoved?

"That night the front of the house disclosed a cozy room with a fireplace, a large radio, a piano and a couch; a place not apart from the rest of the house, yet given in. There had been all week while she sat in the kitchen. Reading in her bedroom alone except for Mrs. Tiddie and her husband smoking his pipe! The week was up. Sunday and Mary was leaving. Nothing, had been a day about her departure. Goodbye! That was all. Mary waited to cry, but couldn't. What an unfeeling man he was! She drove away—tears in her eyes. Fury mingled with fear in her heart—fear that she could never return.

"It was just here, the car first stopped," Mary thought. She slowed down. He was standing by the road. He was dressed quite differently. She stopped the car and he came and leaned in the window looking at her.

"It's been wonderful having you, Mary—will you come again?" he asked quite humbly.

The lights in Mary's eyes were like twin candles. A great thankful sigh rose uncontrolled. Somehow he was in the car beside her, holding her in his arms—and then they were motoring away together to return again.

THE STAR HAS LEARNED THAT

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Lowin at the Wainwright municipal hospital, on October 19th, a boy.

The temperature sure took a sudden drop over the week end, the thermometer registering four below zero early on Monday morning. Indian summer has been making an attempt to break in since then, though!

Possibly owing to the quick freeze up, large numbers of ducks are now nesting in the grain fields around town, and large bags are now reported by our local misrode this week.

A few packages of Muresco will brighten up your living rooms, and make the long winter seem shorter. Sold at the Atlas yard. Ring 57.

Mr. J. Outhbertson motored over Hardisty on Sunday last, and although the roads were not all that could be desired the trip was a pleasant one.

Mr. J. D. Manners, of the Safeway store was taken to the hospital early on Monday morning for treatment. We wish him speedy and full recovery.

Mrs. Taylor, of Hope Valley, was brought to the hospital on Monday and underwent an operation for appendicitis.

These hard times a private greeting Christmas Card can be made the carrier of your good wishes as well as a present. The splendid line of cards at The Star office is just the thing for this business. See the sample book, anyway! It will cost you nothing. Phone 45 and we will send the book to you for perusal.

The date has been set for the annual bazaar put on by the Ladies' Aid of the United Church. This will be held in the I.O.O.F. hall on December 8th.

Realistic characterisations, strong situations and thrilling climaxes, interwoven with consummate skill, are shown in "Mexicali Rose" at the theatre for the last half of this week in the 100 pc. talkies. Don't miss it!

Alec Swanson had a ticklish job on Saturday when he handled the extra big new plate glass window for the Safeway store. And the high wind didn't help matters any, either!

You will need storm sash soon. They last for years and save many times their first cost in fuel. Order yours today from the Atlas yard Joe Welch, phone 57.

Mr. Alec Forbes the trouble shooter for the local telephone district who has been suffering from a carbuncle is now getting along fairly well from this very painful affliction.

Mr. Chas. McMillan, of Kelwood, Man., was in town over the week end to visit his cousin Mrs. W. Huntingford between trains.

Rev. W. J. Huston, pastor of the United church is to be away to Riley this week where he will attend a Presbytery meeting of that denomination.

The 20th anniversary dinner which is being put on by the Ladies of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church on Wednesday next October 22nd promises to surpass all their former efforts. Everybody is invited from 5.30 to 8 p.m. to enjoy this annual festivity with the ladies in the I.O.O.F. hall. A feast such as only these ladies can serve! 50c and 25c.

Another of our old Wainwright boys is out to cover himself with glory in the sports field. Lawrence Aykroyd left last week end to join up with Frank Patrick's celebrated puck chasers at Vancouver for the season.

After spending quite some time in town this fall, Mr. Jack Ganderton has now returned to his home at the coast.

Now is the time to order your storm sash windows and doors, and also to order your winter coal from the Atlas yard. Joe Welch, mgr. phone 57.

Mr. M.H. Williamson, of the Wainwrights Ltd., left on Friday last for Toronto where he will spend the winter. He expects to return about next March.

We regret to learn that Town Clerk Pawling has been under the weather the past few days with an attack of rheumatism. He is now feeling better.

The programme is now being prepared for the School Musical Festival next spring, and judging from the interest already shown, this affair promises to "go over" stronger than ever.

Our sample books of Private Greeting Cards for Christmas and New Year are now available at the Star office. Just phone, we'll be pleased to show these to you without any obligation. Order early and get best choice; they're cheaper this year.

The teachers' convention which is being held at the I.O.O.F. hall on November 24th will see a large influx of visitors to Wainwright for the affair.

The storm and blizzard of last week again delayed the threshers but with the Indian summer weather of the past two days hopes are high for getting this job cleaned up in quick time now. At a rough estimate there is probably about one-third of the crop still to get through the mill.

Mrs. Rom. Chartier, who has been visiting here with her baby is leaving this week to return to her home in Turner Valley.

Take home a load of Newcastlump, Black Diamond lump or Pembina; egg coal; the three best coals on the market. Fresh cars unloaded this week at the Atlas yard. Phone 57.

Mr. Joe Donaldson, who has had quite a siege of sickness in the hospital for several weeks, has now fully recovered and is again at home on the Fred Watts farm.

Mr. E. Swanson, who formerly farmed north of town, was here nearly all last week on business before returning to his home in the States.

The president of the Peninsular Oils Ltd., Mr. S. Hartley, of Toronto, stopped off here for a couple of days last week on his way west.

Mammy Johnson is determined to buy one of "those new look-right-through-me wedding dresses" See "A Southern Cinderella" at the theatre October 29th.

Visiting his farm in the Plaxtol district, Mr. G. Briggs, from Dearby Idaho, is here on a business visit for a short time.

The pastors of the United churches at Edgerton and Wainwright will exchange pulpits on Sunday, and the local evening service will be conducted by Rev. G. King.

Owing to the sudden storm last week, quite a number of travellers were stalled with their cars on the blocked roads. Some spent several days in town, while others received accommodation at different farm houses by the wayside. The C.N. trains which were also blocked by drifts, too, were quickly gotten under way, and soon back to schedule.

Keep your truck insured against fire; the cost is very little for the risk you take. Joe Welch, agent, phone 57.

Children will be served for half price at the 20th anniversary dinner of the L.A. of St. Andrew's church in the I.O.O.F. hall today (Wednesday) Oct. 22nd. Ready at 5.30 and runs till 8 p.m. Admission 50c.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Davey are now preparing to return to their home at the coast after spending the summer here attending to their farm business in this district.

Announcement is made that the big anniversary sale at the Safeway store is continuing until the end of this week, closing on Saturday night next.

The stormy weather of last week brought to your mind the need of storm windows and doors. The Atlas Lumber Co. are well equipped to handle your business in this line or they will glass your broken windows and repair and repaint your storm and screen doors. Ring 57 and they will send a reliable man to make any repairs, alterations or improvements to your home that you have in mind. Joe Welch, mgr.

Mrs. H. V. Feldhouse is making arrangements to spend the winter in the east and has rented her home on Main street to School Inspector Gode.

Work has proceeded so smoothly at the new bank that the managers' quarters in the second story are soon to be ready for occupancy.

"I must know what's in that will!" To learn this see "A Southern Cinderella" on October 29th.

Mr. J. A. MacKenzie has been confined to his home for the past week suffering from a severe cold.

Mrs. Francis Murphy and her daughter Evelyn left on Saturday to join her son Rev. Father Murphy, who is now teaching at the new Separate school in Edmonton.

The terrible sheet storm last week and sure played havoc with the lines of the Calgary Power Co., and caused much trouble at the Ghost River plant of the company that the whole system, including Edmonton was out of commission for a short while on Saturday. Luckily Wainwright, with its plant always available, is not cut out for any great length of time.

Keep out the drafts around windows and doors with a few lengths of felt strip. It's cheap and effective. Atlas yard, phone 57.

Mr. J. C. McLeod is now preparing to finish his new house with a coat of stucco finish, which will add greatly to its appearance.
